3. Special Collections

The Special Collections held in the Old Library contain a wealth of primary sources for historians, as well as early editions of key historical texts. The early printed collections span the fifteenth to eighteenth, and early nineteenth centuries. Owing to the number of statesmen who passed through the College's doors in the sixteenth century, the collections are particularly strong for Britain during the Tudor and Jacobean periods, as well as the Civil Wars of the seventeenth century. The development of the anti-slavery movement in Britain is also well represented, as two Johnnians, Thomas Clarkson and William Wilberforce, were at the forefront of its early campaigns. The collections as a whole are very broad-ranging, however, and provide ample material on topics as diverse as the European Reformation and Counter-Reformation, and the history of medicine. Please ask the Special Collections Librarian, if you would like to explore these resources further.

4. Electronic Resources

Cambridge LibGuides provide a complete guide to all subjects and electronic resources such as e-journals, ebooks and databases available across the University:

Recommendations

The College Library aims to provide all works necessary for Part One courses, and a selection of the most important works required for Part Two. We receive reading lists from the departmental libraries in advance of each academic year, and continually update the Library collections in response to requests from Directors of Studies, supervisors, and students. You can recommend an item by using the online recommendation form or by filling in a recommendation form available at the Issue Desk. All reasonable requests will be considered. If texts you require for your course are not available in the College Library, please talk to a member of Library staff.

Help

If you have any difficulty in tracing the material you need, whether in printed or electronic format, please ask a member of Library staff for assistance.
