

THE JOHN CROOK SCHOLARSHIP

pays for a second degree, at St John's College, Cambridge University, for those who are the first in their family to go to university

Going to university is about much more than getting a degree. It's about developing a fascination for a particular subject or idea, which for some can last a lifetime. It's about being given the time to investigate it and understand it properly.

And it's about being given strong, structured support from world experts to help you to develop that understanding. If this appeals to you, then you should apply for a John Crook Scholarship to continue your studies at St John's College.

The John Crook Scholarship offers students from UK universities an opportunity to study for a second, two-year undergraduate degree at St John's College, Cambridge. Some scholars will have the opportunity to opt into an MPhil programme in their second year. The scholarship would cover up to full cost of your studies, including tuition fees and living costs, depending on your financial circumstances.

To apply you need to be:

- the first generation in your family to go to university
- a current student, or recent graduate, with an exceptional academic record
- a UK citizen

"I had no idea I could apply for such a generous grant for further study at Cambridge University"

Apply via UCAS by the closing date of 15 October 2024 for admission in October 2025.
