

Thinking of further study?

“Going to university opened my eyes to what I could achieve. Now I want to do even more”

A John Crook Scholarship covers the costs of taking a second undergraduate degree – at St John’s College, Cambridge

For many people, going to university is about more than getting a degree; it inspires them to pursue new avenues of intellectual enquiry and ignites a passion for subjects which they had never thought about studying before.

The John Crook Scholarship offers students from UK universities the opportunity to study for a second degree at St John’s College, Cambridge. It can either be a 2-year undergraduate degree as an affiliated student or a Master’s degree.

If you meet the criteria below, you could be eligible. The scholarship would cover all your costs, including fees, and would provide a grant of at least £13,900 for your living expenses for the duration of your course.

You need to be:

- the first in your family to go to university
- a current student, or recent graduate, with an exceptional academic record
- a British citizen
